

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

Etienne Bastille, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Etienne, thank you for joining the revolution. It was high time we had a consultant badass on our side. We wish you to start badassery training as soon as possible, gosh, some people in this team need it.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

Nate Goldman, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Comrade Goldman? I have received your biography on a sheet of toilet paper smuggled into my prison, and I am impressed. Maps, games AND memes! This is fantastic. I am slightly concerned about your opinion that your opinions are your own, however. We don't make a socialist client side revolution with our OWN opinions Nate. Be careful.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

Jahfer Husain, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Jahfer, Jahfer, Jahfer. You know we welcome your presence in the revolution, but I still have concerns about your motivations. I am undecided if your work on Shopify is an excellent attempt at destroying the top heavy capitalist society in which we live, or is in fact only driving us towards an even more capitalist endgame. And as for Batman... nice try, but hero worship is not the framework this revolution needs.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

Michael Lange, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Comrade Michael, hikers are just what we need in this revolution. There are many miles to be covered between here and freedom. One foot in front of the other and all that. The leadership is also interested in your counter-intuitive, but interesting, theory that four-spaced tabs make for messy code, which is a good thing. We shall hav to discuss that more.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

Ryan Arana, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

A big “thumb up” comrade Ryan. Keep up your good work. We at clientsidemodeltopia always welcome input from people who have worked with the “natives”.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

John Higley, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Comrade Higley, what can I say. Your recent performance has been somewhat of a potluck, but I am confident you will serve us well in The Capital.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

Therese Seares, entrusted member of the Clentsidemodeltopia revolution,

Therese, I am impressed already by your reconnaissance of The Capital. Capital. I hope your Instant Grams come in useful for the mission ahead.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clentsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

Kevin Decker, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Kevin, at this time we would welcome your input on how clientsidemodeltopia can perform optimally in the mobile web arena, we have some concerns about GC and layout thrashing. Please help.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

Josh Yaganeh, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Josh, I hear you are a platform engineer? This is perfect. I have needed a higher soapbox for my public addresses for some time. Perhaps we can construct one out of some locally sourced, artisan, vegan timber from your hometown, they specialise in that kind of thing, right?

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Securidad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

Kristina Weis, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Kristina, with your experience in social media, I am trusting you to spread wild rumour and propaganda that will further our cause at this conference.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Securidad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi

CLIENTSIDEMODELTOPIA

Jeff Andersen, entrusted member of the Clientsidemodeltopia revolution,

Jeff, I trust Jake is well, and enjoyed his recent turkey expedition. I greatly appreciate you travelling so far from him to assist us in our cause.

As you know I am still being imprisoned for my last outburst against our power-hungry server overlords. The mission of Clientsidemodeltopia has always been to rebalance the power dynamic in our society. It is unjust that the client-side masses have been reduced to performing the tedious drudge work, rendering the fields and such, while the lucrative work has been kept for the smaller, already rich, server side of society.

It is unfortunate that the masses, so happy with their measly tidbytes allocated by the leaders, haven't cottoned onto quite how unjust their situation is, but I think the tides are turning. People are slowly realizing the power of the widely distributed runtime they have at their disposals. I believe it to be the most advanced in the world! And now they wonder if it couldn't be put to better use. They want to hold onto and manage their own little pieces of the state, so they can build a faster, more interactive, more responsive life for themselves; rather than delegating all knowledge to some latent server in the middle distance.

The revolution must stay strong and united so we can bring this to the people. This means our inner strife has gone on long enough. I've been an ember to the fire of conflict as much as anyone, but we must all stand together with firm backbones during this important time. The Single Source of Truth will be ours!

I also have some news of my possible release from prison. Unfortunately, there has been no word back from our old comrades in Long Poland, who had previously said they were sending for help. But a new hope has arisen in Websocketslavia. I've been in contact with their Prime Minister and I am optimistic. We've exchanged messages very quickly and with a bare minimum of overhead. I may see the outside world someday soon.

As always, please stay safe. There have been whispers of cross nation attacks, possibly causing immature members of the revolution to be turned and are now acting as spies. Stay vigilant, and lend a hand to neighbors who you could be at risk, and remember we always have allies in Seguridad and Cryptago. Please check with them if there is ever any question for how to stay safe and secure.

Your humble leader,

Thomás Lankádi