

18 October 2013

Citizen Kelly,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

Without you, our citizen’s marriages would surely be poorly gifted, and our partners unfashionably dressed! We need you PJ

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Curelli,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

In particular, your knowledge of video and surveillance technologies will, I am sure, be very useful for monitoring West RTC’s movements.

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Bonnin,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

As the fastest runner in our nation, it will be your job to shuttle messages between the other pushtenstein citizens throughout the event. Godspeed young idealist!

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Asimov,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

In particular, I trust you will be particularly effective at finding and tracking the various West RTC infiltrators at the conference. Location is one of your specialties, is it not?

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Dati,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

We hope that your experience in communication technology will be put to good use. Show those upstart RTCers how it’s done!

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Dessart,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

Should any messages need to be composed, you should find the nearest blank keyboard and use that, this should ensure secrecy from enemy. Fellow runner, Citizen Bonnin will ensure that messages are delivered in a timely fashion. We don’t suspect that your WoW skills will be of much use during the conference, however you may wish to discuss the possibilities with Citizen Weakley.

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Thomas,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

We hear that West RTC are impartial to a little Jazz. Perhaps we can distract them with some music?

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Securidad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Weakley,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

What can I say Joe? I am hoping you can figure out a way to combine math-magic, aquaponics, rails and WoW into some kind of huge distraction during the conference.

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Auspurger,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

Enemy surveillance will be a critical part of our success in this mission, you may wish to collaborate with fellow video expert Citizen Curelli!

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Tennant,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

We are aware of your mixed allegiance Citizen Tennant. One might say you are something of a distributed apologist, but we get it. We hope this will help you infiltrate the West RTC camp. Just don’t forget who’s side you are on!

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Moreau,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

I hope you can make good use of that BA of yours for creating some propaganda pieces for our cause.

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Securidad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Drake,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

Natalia, we hope your experience in the performing arts will help you disguise yourself as the enemy, and uncover more secret, and should things get dangerous, I’d recommend hiding on the second storey.

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Seguridad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein

18 October 2013

Citizen Mayo,

It is with much respect that I have requested your transit to The Great Capital City for the conference that what occurs in Real Time for an important mission.

It has come to our attention that the small, upstart nation of West RTC are proposing a kind of “peer to peer” communication channel that threatens our server based livelihood. Currently they look weak, confused, disorganised, and frankly we’re not sure they stand a chance. But! Were they to succeed, we would almost certainly become an outcast state.

Please find enclosed a leaked top-secret memo from the West RTC government (if you can call that rabble a democracy) that outlines some of their weaknesses, most notably their inability to communicate. It would appear that General Gewgle and First Minister Föx are only just on speaking terms, while the rest of the leaders refuse to cooperate. It is of the utmost importance that you exploit and expose the weaknesses in West RTC’s government, plans and weaknesses at this conference. If at all possible, find your fellow citizens and plan the overwhelming humiliation of West RTC.

As the smallest nation on this fine earth, we cannot afford to lose one of our most well respected citizens, but the import of the task ahead requires someone of your calibre.

We are forever in your debt for your contributions to The Node. Thank you Mark!

Fear not for your safety. Since we are the only country officially designated as a member of the Web of Trust, we’ve been able to arrange a number of plain clothes Content Security Police from The Republic of Securidad and Cryptago who will be protecting you. You will not know who they are until they are needed, but they are there, always.

Stay safe citizen,

With admiration,

Prince Philipp II of Pushtenstein