

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Kestrel Legastero.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

It is with great anticipation that we await news regarding your presentation at the conference. Our sources indicate that you will be unveiling quite the product! We know that it will fully demonstrate the versatility of the mighty transport, and will do our homeland proud.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Roberto Recorde.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

As you know, I highly value your polyglot experience and contributions to the XMPP community, and I am extremely grateful for the many miles you have travelled to attend this conference.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Olivia Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Court Fowler.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

As a master of maps at ESRI, I have no doubt that you will make a great representative of Transportvania in The Capital.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Olivia Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Kenichi Nakamura.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

I am so pleased that someone who has such intimate experience with mapping technology can represent our fine country at the conference in The Capital. It brings me much hope for the future of Transportvania.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Cody Peterson.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

In writing this letter, I think to myself: we as a nation must not sabotage ourselves! Like it or not I think our recent starter websites have been like pledges from a five year old. - it's as if they intended to spend five years with a secret penguin, but never got past weeks 1, 2 and 3. We have foregone our proactive nature and become responsive to everything - frankly our current plan is like a wad of paper jammed into a toilet.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Nikolas Wise.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

I agree, the capacities of the human body to locate itself are overrated. However, that's what Transportvania is here for afterall - to ensure the safe passage for both people and data across this great planet.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Keith Black.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

Keith, Transportvania welcomes your limited presence on the internet. We are sure that this secrecy will ensure your safe passage through the conference, and give you opportunity to glean much information to our benefit.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear David Bixler.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

I am glad that you enjoyed your trip to The Capital so much last year and decided to return again this year. We are hopeful that your son (what is he now, 8?) is still a fan of trains. We are glad that you are raising him as a good transportvanian, it is important that we inspire the inquisitive young minds of our generation.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Ben Acker.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

I hope this isn't overstepping the mark, Ben, but I am somewhat hopeful that you will reveal yourself completely unmasked to your fellow countrymen during the conference. We, in the royalty, are somewhat fond of your stock facial features, and we can't help but feel that your squirrely disguise may be offputting to the other guests.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Ian Hansen.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

If you are short of discussion points during the conference, I am sure your fellow countrymen will be happy to discuss the budget situation back home, and particularly its effects on various recreational activities.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Olivia Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Curtis Chambers.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

Your work in both transport and realtime will make you most useful at this conference. I bid you good luck!

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Olivia Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania

---

17 October 2013

Dear Zeke Sikelianos.

May I first thank you for attending the Conference in The Great Capital City as a representative of Transportvania. It was my desire to be in attendance, however there are high value services at home that require my personal oversight. I trust that you will find your hosts and fellow attendees cordial, if not amiable.

In particular, Zeke, I am intrigued by your proposal of a 6 seater bicycle as a new transport for the future of the web. It may also come in handy during this conference - The Capital is well known for it's bicycle admiration.

I must note at this point that there is some question as to the role Transportvania will play in many of the discussions taking place at the Conference. The climate regarding global communication methodologies appears headed toward a boiling point. As you are well aware, we generally avoid siding with any one faction, given our responsibility to world citizens to provide safe passage to any who request it.

All that said, I confess to you in confidence that there have been discussions at the highest levels of our government regarding Transportvania's role. Suffice it to say that while you are being asked to remain indifferent to all parties, we do place great value in the discovery of ancillary benefit to Transportvania to be gained if we were to, say, make an official proclamation regarding our preferred convention at some point in the future.

Reliably yours,

Oliviana Sabina Ichor, Fourth Duchess of Transportvania